Diverging Destinies

Maternal Education and the Developmental Gradient
in Time with Children

ARIEL KALIL is a professor in the Harris School of Public Policy and director of the Center for Human Potential and Public Policy at the University of Chicago. She is a developmental psychologist who studies how economic conditions affect child and family functioning. Her projects have examined how transitions from welfare to work affect mothers and children, barriers to the employment of welfare recipients, as well as family processes and child development in female-headed, teenage-parent, and cohabiting-couple households.
