Internship Opportunities

The UC Davis Center for Poverty Research has four positions available for undergraduate students seeking internship opportunities. These opportunities are part-time positions available beginning January 2016. Applicable majors would include:

- Economics
- Political Science
- Sociology
- Psychology
- Human and Community Development
- Journalism
- Or other closely related majors

Students should have an interest in poverty-related research and public policy. The position is located on the UC Davis Campus.

Job Description

The Public Policy Research internship provides an opportunity for undergraduate students to work closely with Center for Poverty Research staff in order to research current legislative policy (both at the Federal and State Levels) in order to disseminate the Center's latest research. It is desirable that the intern have interest in poverty-related research and/or in public policy, as well as computer database and word-processing skills. Interns are encouraged to be creative and take initiative.

Qualified interns should be pursuing an undergraduate degree in economics, political science, sociology, psychology, human and community development, journalism, or closely related majors. Students having completed at least their sophomore year are preferred. Good interpersonal, communication, organizational, teamwork and time management skills are essential.
