

The Effect Of Breakfast In The Classroom On Obesity & Academic Performance:

Evidence From New York City

Thursday, April 25, 2013
12:10 - 1:30 pm
Andrews Conference Room
2203 SS&H

Sean Corcoran, Associate Professor of educational economics at New York University's Steinhardt School. Professor Corcoran's research focuses on three areas: human capital in the teaching profession, education finance, and school choice. His papers examine long run trends in the quality of teachers, the impact of income inequality and court ordered school finance reform on the level and equity of education funding in the United States, the properties of value-added measures of teacher effectiveness, and the political economy of school choice reforms. For the 2012-13 academic year, he is a Visiting Scholar at the Center for Education Policy Analysis at Stanford University.

CENTER FOR Poverty Research
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, DAVIS

poverty.ucdavis.edu